Hosting an international student for the first time

Aurélie, Mathieu and their two children welcomed an international student for the first time. Juliana arrived from Mexico at the end of August 2022, only two weeks after her host parents agreed to take on the adventure.

The host family was initially undecided about hosting a young person from abroad “We kept telling ourselves we would do this when the kids were gone,” explains Aurelie. But finally, they decided to go for it. “As soon as we saw the pictures and the description of Juliana, it was love at first sight”, says the host mother.

A few weeks later, the young girl arrived in Dieppe, and a very meaningful exchange ensued for both Juliana and her host family. Juliana was able to discover New Brunswick, build a snowman for the first time, visit the Van Gogh exhibit in Prince Edward Island and try Canadian cuisine.

For their part, Mathieu, Aurélie and their children say they learned a lot too. With Juliana, they were able to practice their Spanish, eat Mexican food and learn about traditions such as the Day of the Dead and Mexican Independence Day.

According to Aurélie, communication is the key to having a good experience. “Don’t hesitate to ask questions and be transparent,” she concludes.

If, like Mathieu and Aurélie, you would like to host an international student, you can fill out the information request form today: ICI

A LOOK BACK AT THE WINTER

This winter, the international students were able to do all sorts of typical canadian activities.

They went on a ski trip all together. They saw the Sugarloaf Mountains.

Patricio from Mexico, Anastasia from Italy, Magdalena and Lorenz from Germany went fat biking at the Caraquet outdoor center.

And of course, what would winter be without a skating session?

Enya from Switzerland even won the gold medal in hockey at the Polyvalente Roland Pepin tournament

SPRING IS COMING!

What would the end of winter be without a little maple syrup tasting?
Youths staying in Bathurst, Campbellton and the Acadian Peninsula went by limousine to the Sucrerie Chiasson.
